

HAT HARBINGERS OF SPRING

Note the Puffed Silk Crown

WHO does not welcome the hints of the change in millinery that come to us early in the spring-time? Winter hats show their wear, and the freshness of the new styles, and the brightness of straw, ribbon and trimming give us a new lease on life and a smile when we think of clothes. These harbingers are coming to us sooner each season. We laugh at the forcing of the new styles, but we wear them. Look at the hat harbingers here shown, for they presage the styles that will be correct for spring. They are safe guides for womankind when hats are donned.

In dark blue there is a rolled shape that fits closely over the hair and rejoices in a simple trimming of ribbon and flowers. The soft hemp, which is the favorite straw for spring, is sharply turned at one side, and the brim is held in place by the band of blue ribbon that extends from the crown and ends in a bow at the side. The blue flowers are grouped in a line at the front.

Moire will be one of the popular silks for trimming the spring hat. It is formed into wings to trim the small hemp shape at the back. These are wired and slant out in a chic line. A strip of moire holds the turned brim up at one side.

Note the soft crown of moire on the shape that has very little trimming. This full crown of silk is a feature that will be easily copied and will at the same time give simplicity to the woman who demands it. Taffeta, bengaline and corded weaves are used in Paris for these puffed tops. Entire hats of the silks are also favored.

Trimming at each side of the broad shape is a becoming note on the hat of taffeta and straw. The top of the brim and the crown are covered with taffeta. The bunches of numidie are placed on the edge of the brim, rising above it.

Look at the puffed model of taffeta. It is one of the most insistent notes in the spring song of millinery. The upturned brim is covered with the silk, and the crown, too, has a covering of taffeta. At the back there is a large bow of taffeta that is placed under the brim. At the front there is a fantasia, which can be substituted by any of the grasses that are now in evidence.

Small shapes that are turned and twisted away from the head are here; extreme height in turbans, either shown in the straw or attained by high draped crowns or trimming, is one of the features.

Hemp, milan and taffeta are the great favorites. The trimming promises variety yet simplicity—and, best of all, small bills. As for the placing of the ornament, use your own judgment, for it has circled the brim or crown, pausing wherever the artistic hand has chosen to stop. Of course, it were wise to keep the artistic eye on the face beneath. No style is suitable for all types of faces.

As interesting as the first green buds on the trees or the song of the bluebirds is the hint of spring in the millinery world. The suggestions from the world-known ateliers are too important to be unheeded.

Players Contracts Received—Hamilton's Derby Value Increased—Championship Hockey To-night

Hamilton Baseball Club Received Contracts From New Players

Ottawa Team Has Many Hold-outs This Year—Shaeffer Considering Fed's Offer.

The officials of the Hamilton Baseball Club received the signed contracts of the players who will be on the Hamilton line-up this season from Manager Yates yesterday, and according to reports given out this morning they are a fairly looking lot and when they report here on April 15 the rail birds who make a practice of watching them work out will see some very fast men in action. Every man on the local roster has played for some time, and if they live up to the past performance the Hamilton team should be up fighting when the count is taken up.

Jack Shaeffer, the champion batsman of the Canadian League last year, will be seen in action here again this season when the Erie team again plays with the local club. The writer received a letter from Jack yesterday in which he stated his present standing, and according to his own confession he is well satisfied with his present berth, but he is still considering an offer that he received from Manager Stoval to play with the Toronto team at a salary of $1,000 a year. Shaeffer is well known in this city as the owner of the woods and the Hamilton fans who witnessed some of his performances here last season with the willow, had no doubt that he is the best stick handler in the Can-Am circuit. Jack received the above offer from Stoval and he is still considering it. He says in the letter that he is well satisfied with the Erie berth but he would like to go with the Toronto team, who has sent him a big offer. Shaeffer's friends here would be glad to see him with the Can-Am League, so in all probability he will be seen with the Erie team this coming season.

"Marty" Killian, who did much work for the Hamilton Can-Am League Club last season, will be in higher company this season if he shows any form at all. The writer Toronto International on their spring training trip at Marlin, Springfield, Mass. Killian was successful in handling the position. During his stay here he made a good impression and had had his motion when at Marlin. Killian should just about right. He has a good motion, and in all probability he will be a fixture with the Leafs for 1914.

Sporting Comment

The Hamilton five-man team that will compete at the Ontario tournament on the 17th of this month, have been practicing hard in the evening, and when they show up on the same team as they have been doing during the past few days, they will be a low score compared with the score that the local team will put on the team having had experience in the Bowling Tourney at Rochester last season, they should not suffer from stage fright. Jack Yates and Mason should also show up well at the tourney, and in all probability the Hamilton team will be well represented at the tourney.

If "Marty" Killian shows up well with the Toronto International, as he will be the first to show up, he is keeping the time that has ever played with the Hamilton contingent and having enough to go on. "Marty," as every one knows, handled the position at second in his big league form last year, and he will be a man like Joe Kelley looking after the position, and he will be a great deal of help to the team.

H.Y.C. To Have Larger Club House

Present Place is Too Small—The Members Will Decide on Change.

The Royal Hamilton Yacht Club for next season will have a much newer and attractive appearance than the one of last year, if the present plan now under careful examination goes through, and in all probability this will be the case. At the present time the Yacht Club has a very large membership, and the accommodations are not large enough for all. Several times last year a large number of people applied for a membership card, but the club was unable to accept them. This year the club intends to make the place larger, and they will be able to accept the new applicants. The new alterations that the club intends to make will be in the neighborhood of $2,000. Besides the above-mentioned alterations, it is the intention of the club to have the exterior of the club house, the boat house, and the fence surrounding the club painted, at an additional cost of $500, and the new alterations that the club intends to make will be in the neighborhood of $2,000. The announcement came in the following brief statement from the President's secretary, Joseph Tumulty:

"The President and Mrs. Wilson announce the engagement of their youngest daughter Eleanor Randolph to Hon. William Gibbs McAdoo."

The announcement was made in order to discontinue reports circulated this afternoon that objection to the match had been raised by the President.

CANTINIERE OUT Picturesque French Figure For Peace Alone.

Will Not Share Dangers of Active Service

Paris, March 12.—The picturesque cantinier, or woman who takes charge of the French regimental canteens, and who have played many heroic parts in French military history, are no longer to share the dangers of active service with the troops, according to the Minister for War.

The women, one of whom is commissioned to each battalion of infantry, regiment of cavalry or battery of artillery, are to be retained simply in times of peace.

Formerly the women, wearing the uniform of their branch of the service, marched into battle with the troops, serving often as nurses or carrying soothing drinks to the wounded. They were the wives of non-commissioned officers or musicians, and if their husbands died or were killed they usually married a comrade. Otherwise they could not remain in the service.

The Minister of War has now decided that the women are a tax on the food supply of the army, and interfere with the rapid movement of troops marching to the front.

THE MAN IN OVERALLS

My advice to the Magistrate is, Don't worry!

I thought that I was varying more than my fair share of the cost of pumping the water.

We should have a cross-town line or two. This continual walking is growing tiresome.

Excuse me. But I always forget that this is Lent. But I never forget to get to church at least.

Those "don't spit on the sidewalk" signs should also receive the attention of Mr. Anderson.

I hope that the Connaught Hotel building will be a real ornament to the city. We need a more stylish building in the business section of the city.

Isn't it about time that we had another Chinese road?

One way of getting over those hotel houses in the east end would be to have the City Council declare that portion of the city to be a restricted district.

The next time I see Jack Gordon I am going to ask him when the new art gallery is to be opened to the public.

The mayor is certainly foolish to buy a red wig for his car. People will think that it is an anarchist.

What do you think of my proposal to turn the street car tracks along the south side of the "C"?

I often feel like as if I should lift my hat to a boy, especially if he is a civil little chap. The point is that his hat is so much like mine.

At the Praters' Open anniversary to-night there will be reminders for you. I am sure that it is exceedingly good for you. It will be very joyful to have people around to do even good for you—but in time you would become a mental and moral monster.

The Gore street congregation will be quite small to-morrow.

Home Chat's thought to-day: When you get badly used to being good, you have to do many things for yourself, remember that it is exceedingly good for you. It will be very joyful to have people around to do even good for you—but in time you would become a mental and moral monster.

LED DUBLIN MOB Son of Marshal White Field Police at Bay.

Five Charges of Assault
Laid Against Him

Dublin, March 12.—Leading a march on the Lord Mayor's home at the head of an army of the unemployed, Captain White, son of Field Marshal Sir George Stuart White, defender of Ladysmith during the Boer war, met a battalion of the police so hotly that five accusations of assault were laid against him. These were made by a police inspector, a sergeant of police, two policemen and the driver of a mail wagon.

Inspector Parnell, who led the police. During the brief and sanguinary fight, many heads among the attacking and defending forces were broken, among them that of Captain White.

Captain James Robert White, formerly of the First Gordon Highlanders, was one of the leaders in the movement started in Dublin to organize a national force to uphold the authority of the Queen and King's and distinguished Orders Service Medals, received his commission in the army in order to organize a National force, and started his work by recruiting the men on strike in Dublin last year.

HOME RULE BILL Asquith's Speech on Monday Will be Important.

London, March 12.—Mr. Asquith's statement on Monday on home rule will be one of great importance, for it is understood that not only will it outline the consequential changes in the home rule bill involved by the offer of Monday last, but will also announce the future action of the Government in the now inevitable event of the Opposition in the House of Commons rejecting the Asquith's offer as it stands.

The last few days have witnessed a great stiffening of opinion among the coalition rank and file against any extension of the suggestion advanced last Monday by the Premier, and in the present temper of the Nationalists as well as of the backbench Liberals, it is safe to say that Mr. Asquith could make no advance on his offer without splitting his followers.

It is not yet clear what will be the result of the suggestion advanced last Monday by the Premier, and in the present temper of the Nationalists as well as of the backbench Liberals, it is safe to say that Mr. Asquith could make no advance on his offer without splitting his followers.

NEAR END OF MILITANCY

'Cat and Mouse' Act is Breaking Up the Party.

London, March 12.—The Daily Mail prints what it calls "a carefully considered statement obtained from high official sources in reference to the Government's attitude toward the militant suffragettes. It reiterates, in substance, the statement in the same paper to the effect that the "Cat and Mouse" Act is steadily crushing the militant movement, and adds:

"The Women's Social and Political Union is no longer able to command the activities of more than a very few militants. The days of organized conspiracy and big raids are over. A year ago there were fifty or more women ready to commit militant crimes. Nearly all of them are now being forced to abandon their criminal activities by repeated imprisonment. Militant critics are now confined to a dozen women, of whom none are well known. Several of them are said to be serving long terms in jail. Train Children To Take Interest In Country Life

Teach Them, Says Lloyd George, How Very Much Superior Country Life is to Town Life

The cost of education in England and Wales between 1901-5 and 1905-9 had just doubled, rising from just over £12,000,000 to just under £24,000,000, while since then it had gone up to £29,000,000, said Mr. Lloyd George in the British Parliament. He stated he could feel confident that they were getting their money's worth. Education had been until recently very available in rural districts for it had not been the children for country life. It was glad that there had been a great change in recent years in the whole direction of education, but he wanted a more revolutionary change. Children ought not merely to be equipped for country life, but to be trained to take an interest in it.

He hoped that during the next few years which every party was in power a real effort would be made to teach the children something about their own surroundings, and how very much superior country life was to town life for any one who had been trained to take an interest in the country. A good deal of the money which had been given to the Development Commissioners had been spent on agricultural education, but even now we were not spending nearly as much as the United States with its enormous amount of virgin soil. We were working up in that direction and he hoped the State in future would take a greater financial interest in agricultural development. On education generally speaking the cost had increased enormously, but the proportion which the State contributed was less by four or five per cent. than it was some years ago.

FEW CHANCES FOR MARRIAGE

Women in England and Wales Out-number Men by Over a Million

In his pamphlet concerning the Suffragette agitation Sir Almon Wright advanced the suggestion that the true remedy for the superiority of women in England—which he regarded as the cause of all trouble—was for the men to come to remove themselves from the Dominion and marry there. This view is examined at some length in the Second Interim Report of the Dominions Royal Commission. The Report points out that there is a surplus of 1,779,000 women in England and Wales and a deficiency of 256,000, as compared with males. Australia. But of the surplus women in this country it appears that 10,000 are over forty and for the most part are to be found in two classes, elderly ladies and women servants. "The former are the 'hardly possible' migrants and 'the latter can now ill be spared.'"

GERMANY AND THE LATE KING EDWARD

Germany and the Late King Edward—Prince Von Bülow's new book on Germany contains the following reference to the late King Edward: "He was a monarch extraordinary in sight into the character of men, who knew to a nicety the art of handling them, and had a wide and varied experience. English policy (under King Edward's influence) did not so much aim at directly opposing the interests of Germany as at gradually checking them by shifting the balance of power in Europe. By a series of alliances, for the sake of which considerable British interests were several times sacrificed, she sought to attach herself to other States of Europe, and so to isolate Germany."

LONGING FOR WORK

An Oxford Man's Appeal to a Town Council

The following letter from Mr. H. E. Lee, Guildford, was read at a meeting of the Guildford Town Council: "As a resident in Guildford I am writing to offer my services to the town in whatever capacity they may be of use. I came to Guildford three years ago, and hoped I should be in time to find employment of some kind here, but have found very little after much search. I am a teacher by profession, and a university education (Oxford), 47 years of age. I want remunerative work, but have a greater wish to be of some use in the town, and am quite willing to work for nothing if I can help in any way. I am not a fanatic, and, being quite unconnected with trade or business, I have no axe to grind." On the motion of the Mayor the letter was referred to a committee for consideration.

TAX CONTRIBUTIONS MUST BE ACCORDING TO ABILITY TO PAY

Herbert Samuel Says That is the First Test of Fairness—Would Increase Taxation on Personality

In the course of a debate in the British Parliament Mr. Herbert Samuel said that within the last 20 years in England and Wales the expenditure on main roads, police, poor relief, and education had risen from £18,000,000 to £28,000,000, and, while there was a larger assessable value, and an increased subvention from the Exchequer, the burden on the local rates had become very heavy. The increase had been largely due to the higher standard, for the public rightly needed more. It was not ultimately an evil that a larger proportion of the growing wealth of the community should be spent socially through the State and local authorities instead of being spent individually. A great deal of that expenditure, and a great deal of the expenditure which the House was asked to find for armaments, was beneficial and advantageous to the community as a whole, and its growth was not a matter to be regarded as an unmitigated evil. We had an immense debt of most devoted labor being given by the members of the local governing authorities both in town and country to the improvement of the environment of the people, not only by country gentlemen, whose work had been rightly praised, but in the towns also. It was impossible to praise too highly the amount of voluntary unpaid labor thus willingly given by no fewer than 100,000 people in the United Kingdom—that was apart from the parish councils. If, however, we were to enable local authorities to improve still further our system of education, to strike even more efficiently at the causes of ill-health, if we were to enable them to develop our towns on worthy lines, we must not only enlarge the powers of the local authorities, but also give them more elbow-room in matters of finance. If it had been suggested that national services should be taken over by the Imperial Government, but that would not be consistent with local management. Where they had local management there must be local responsibility for raising the money required for carrying on those services. We had come to a moment when the whole system of local taxation must be reviewed in the light of the fundamental principles of taxation. And the first of those principles was that the contribution, whether for national or local purposes, must be according to ability to pay. That was the first test of fairness.

made the objects of special legislation. To the Government it appeared that the right method at which they should aim was neither a single tax on land values nor a single tax on incomes, but that our local system of taxation like our Imperial system, should be a mixed system and combine within itself the various elements each of which were just, and each of which might be made the source of a proper and useful revenue to the local authorities. The broad lines on which the Government would proceed had been indicated by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and had been received with approval from all quarters of the House. To this great and difficult question the energies of the Government would this year in a very large measure be devoted.

One method of reform must be to secure a larger measure of contribution to local taxation from personality. In the view of the Government the same principle applied to land, in a large degree, as to housing. Apart from the improvements which the efforts of expenditure of the individual owners might have made the value of land itself was a socially created thing to a larger degree than any other value. Therefore the Government held that, supplemental to the first principle that men should be taxed according to their ability to pay, there was this principle, that land and other socially created values might justly be Montreal, March 14.—The Montreal Canadiens, provincial champions, the Sydney team, may not get a chance for the Stanley Cup this year.

The Maritime title was finally decided only last night, it being necessary there, as in the National selection, to play home and home games.

"If one team wins the Victoria series in three straight games," President Quinn, "there will be no chance for Sydney. But if the series runs into four or five games, which is quite possible, I'm afraid the chances will have to wait until next year."

UPPER CLOTHING

Pressmaking Hints for GIRLS

It often happens that a girl has a pretty frock, which has become out of the reigning style, but is too good and too becoming to throw away. Now, if a girl has such a frock, she can remodel it and make it a new one. It has a soft satin neck—

It is sewed up, rounded off and hemmed to the right length, take a piece of velvet of the shade of the dress and make a knee-length overskirt gathered in at the waist, being a circle formed of the skirt satin you have removed from the skirt. Round the bottom of the overskirt over your new collar of shirred satin or material of the same, about two inches wide. This gives a pretty finish and is less expensive than a lace or embroidery border. Make a simple bodice of the chiffon and put over the old satin bodice whose sleeves have been cut out and whose neck has been cut in the "Dutch" style, allowing the neck shawl to fall over the bodice of chiffon which is finished at the throat with a lace or gold or silver ribbon. The sleeves are allowed to drop to the elbow, the arms showing through in the sleeves. The sleeves are finished with a lace or gold or silver ribbon, with little tassels hanging from the tied ends of the cords just at the back of the elbow.

After you have remodelled your frock in the above way you will feel that it is a new frock. It is as good as a new frock. Any color will be pretty draped with collar of corresponding shade, unless it be a very dark, sombre color. In that case, make a lace or gold or silver ribbon. If the frock be brown, use lace or champagne chiffon, and gold cord trimmings.

A very pretty and artistic hair-band may be made in the following way: Take black velvet ribbon (the blonde) about one and a half inches wide. Make it long, and cut the ends of the head in the style desired. Make large white satin felt daisies with yellow satin ribbon, sew on the velvet band, at two inches apart. At the left side place a cluster of the daisies with long green satin leaves. They may be wired so as to make them stay in place. The ribbon may become to the girl with hair tresses. For her dark-haired hair, use light color satin ribbon. The ribbon should be used, say pink, yellow or blue, with daisies corresponding to the color of the ribbon. The ribbon should be used, say pink, yellow or blue, with daisies corresponding to the color of the ribbon. Pretty white velvet muff for early spring

For late winter—after the first winter hat has become worn and perhaps "dowdy"—is made of soft cream satin and trimmed with a huge bow of black velvet at the back. A fancy buckle finishing the bow adds to the artistic effect. Such a hat may be made up at very small expense. Indeed, almost every girl's mother will find among her millinery "treasures" enough black velvet to make a muff in a desirable shade. Also a rich cream satin, which will furnish the bow and the ends of the muff. The hat may be made up at very small expense. Mr. March Hare Meets a Lion.

An Exciting Scene in the Woods.

WELL, this is the first Sunday in March!

It was Mr. March Hare who said this.

He was speaking to his family, Mr. March Hare and his wife, who were sitting at the table.

"Yes, and I have not been out of the house since the snow melted," said Mrs. Hare.

"I have taken the children out for a run over the fields every day, but here you have stayed cooped up like a bird in a cage."

"But, as you say, I am cooped up like a bird in a cage, and I am not a bird, I am a hare."

"And I really had no cause to go, for there was plenty of food in the cellar and water at the spring, so why should I go out into danger?"

"I'm not saying that you should stick your long ears into danger, my dear," declared Mr. Hare.

"I don't think it good for your health to remain indoors all this fine weather. This being Sunday, the farmer and his family will be away from home. So there will be no danger from your going out today."

"Well, my dear, you have good going out today," replied Mr. Hare, smiling at his pretty wife, who was sitting at the table.

on earth had come. There, not fifteen feet from him, stood the most awful creature that ever been his kind.

"Ah, ha, and so you do not know your friend!" The roar had changed into a speaking voice. And it seemed friendly enough, too. Mr. March Hare dared to peer one eye in the direction of the creature that had come to him so suddenly. "I never heard of you, my friend," said Mr. Hare, smiling at him. of March. We belong together during the opening of Spring."

"But," said Mr. March Hare, "I have a family. I must return to them. They will be looking for me within half an hour."

"But I cannot go without making with you."

"The truth is, Mr. March Hare was trembling a bit in his skin, for Mr. Lion looked so huge and forbidding, and Mr. March Hare had heard of his many terrible acts, and knew of his carnivorous appetite for such delicate creatures as hares. But he did not wish Mr. Lion to know that he feared him. So he put the excuse about his family—which, by the way, was true. Although his family did not form the least reason for his wishing to get home, that was as possible."

"Well, my dear little fellow, since you must go home to your family, why don't you be cordial and invite me to join you? I should love to meet Mrs. Hare and the little hare. And—since I see the invitation on your little lips, I shall say, 'Yes, thank you.' Will you go with me?"
